Lateral Epicondylitis

What is lateral epicondylitis?

Lateral epicondylitis, or tennis elbow, affects 1-3% of Americans each year. The epicondyles are the two bumps on the inside (medial) and outside (lateral) part of the elbow. They form the end of the long bone in the upper arm, called the humerus. The tendons of the extensor muscles attach to the lateral epicondyle. These muscles include the extensor carpi radialis brevis, extensor carpi radialis longus, and extensor digitorum. These tendons cause chronic degenerative inflammation, which leads to edema, persistent inflammation, pain, and scarring.

Anatomy

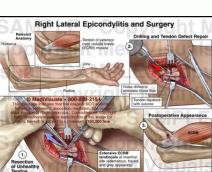

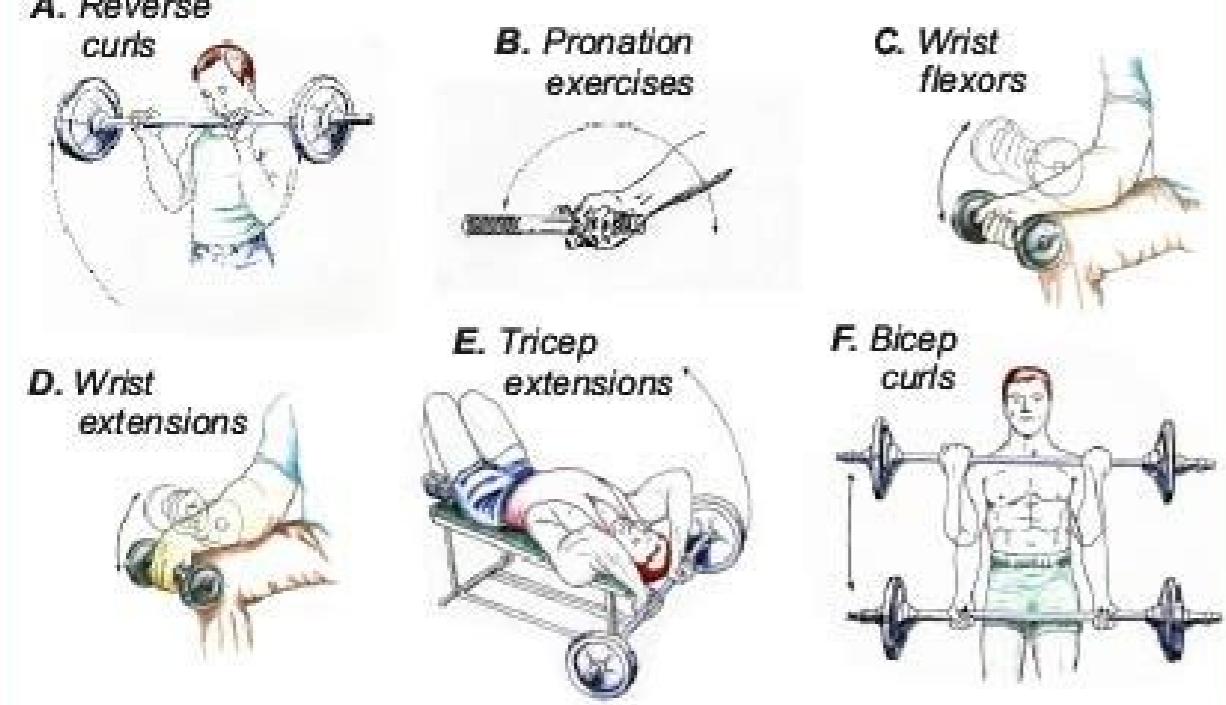

Muscles that extend the wrist (bend it towards the back of the hand) are attached to the lateral epicondyle by tendons. These muscles include extensor carpi radialis brevis, extensor carpi radialis longus, and extensor digitorum. The breakdown, and subsequent pain, from lateral epicondylitis usually occurs along these tendons, about 1 cm from the lateral epicondyle.

Causes

Lateral epicondylitis usually occurs because of overuse or repetitive motion of the extensor muscles of the wrist. This can occur because of:

- Poor conditioning of the muscles in the upper arm and shoulder, causing an overuse on the extensor muscles.
- Improper technique or positioning with athletic equipment.

of the elbow. The muscles on the back of your forearm, responsible for curling your wrist backwards, are anchored to this bony point. Pain in this bump is called lateral epicondylitis (also known as 'tennis elbow'). Anyone can get tennis elbow (lateral epicondylitis), not just athletes. Repetitive arm motions weaken arm muscles and tear the tendons that attach muscle to bone. Tennis elbow can cause pain when you bend or straighten your arms or grasp or lift items. Since 1974, our doctors and staff at Heartland Orthopedic Specialists have been the trusted orthopedic experts in Alexandria, Willmar, Morris, Graceville, Wadena, Fergus Falls, and the surrounding areas.
